Mike

I think it is safe to assume that anything you can provide in your list would be helpful. Certainly the language in the contract between EPA and EE or some other contractor would be helpful - and yes anything on the EandE's insurance policy etc. And yes, we can resolve without you signing on a drilling contractor. We are simply trying to understand the legal language you use when you contract, Mike.

Hi Chris,

I left you a voice mail this morning, following up on the message below from Monday. Any info you can give me on what y'all are specifically asking for in the Master Service Agreement? Also, as I mentioned this morning, we do not have a drilling subcontractor on board yet, and cannot provide this type of information until we contract with someone. What is Chesapeake's thoughts on that? Can we resolve this without the sub's info?

Subject: Master Service Agreement info

Hi Chris,

We are having trouble identifying what to give Chesapeake in response to your request for the Master Service Agreement. Could you have someone put together a description of what information you are wanting to see included in this documentation? Are you thinking it is between EPA and E&E, or E&E and their insurance provider? Is it E&E's insurance policy, or the contract between EPA and E&E? Something else? Will you want the same from the drilling subcontractor?

Also, if the site characterization shows we don't need the underpad wells, does this cease to be an issue?

Thanks,

Mike
